Biographical sketch:

Myrtle L. K. Macneill was born on August 2, 1883, in Havelock, New Brunswick, to single mother Ada Macneill from Cavendish, PEI. Myrtle Macneill was thirteen years old in 1896 when she moved to the farm that would become known as Green Gables in Cavendish, PEI, with her mother, Ada. They returned to help care for the 140-acre farm of Ada's elderly aunt and uncle, as well as siblings Margaret and David Macneill.

Ada Macneill married and moved to a nearby community a few years later, but Myrtle stayed at the Macneill farm. During this time, Myrtle became good friends with her cousin Lucy Maud Montgomery, who, having been away at university and teaching the previous few years, now lived just half a kilometer down the road.

When visiting family in O'Leary, PEI, Myrtle met farmer Ernest Cecil Webb (born in O'Leary on December 3, 1880). In 1905, Myrtle and Ernest married on the Macneill farm in Cavendish. The newlyweds moved to O'Leary for a time but returned in 1909 to look after David and Margaret again – this time in return for ownership of the farm.

Myrtle and Ernest Webb had five children: Marion ("Peggy"), Keith, Anita ("Neta"), Lorraine ("Waine"), and Pauline ("P.J.").

Ernest died on May 17, 1950, and Myrtle died on February 11, 1968. They are buried together in the Cavendish Community Cemetery in Cavendish, PEI.
